Except by definite instruction from a skillful physician, a sick person should never be awakened to take medicine, for under nearly every circumstance sleep is the first and best of nourishers and restoratives. It is nature's own medicine.

HERE is a nice strawberry sauce that can be used with any pudding: "Beat to a cream one-half cup of sweet butter and two cups of powdered sugar; add a heaped half pint of strawberries. Mash the fruit thoroughly and beat it into the sauce.'

Brooms are bent out of shape by being allowed to rest on the floor instead of being hung up. Dipping them once or twice a week in a kettle of boiling suds is the careful housekeeper's method of making them last twice as long as they otherwise would.

Tims is said to be an effectual vermin exterminator: Dissolve two pounds of alum in three or four quarts of boiling water and apply, while hot, to every joint or crevice where ants and cockronches congregate. It is useful to pantry shelves and bedsteads, for kitchen floors and base boards. Use a brush in appling it.

Shapes for the windows of a house should not be selected until the color of the interior decorations and the surroundings have been fully considered. Glaring colors like bright blues and greens are upt to be as disagreeable inside as on the outside. Plain white awnings are found to look better after the second year than faded striped ones.

PAINT, however old and dry it may be, can be removed from carpets or draperies by a liberal use of chloroform. Saturate the spot, keep it closely covered for half so hone, then brush out. The liquid destroys the oil in the paint, leaving only a powder that usually comes out with no stain, unless on very delicate fabries. In obstinate cases, the application may need prosaic looking wooden back. To begin with, a panel of light-colored Japanese gauze or painted satials mailed straight on the wood; it is then framed by a darker drapery arranged with resettes at right angles something like a door curtain; should a thin material be chosen for the drapery, it is desirable to arrange it previously on a leose frame, and nail the same on the plano. The ends are covered plain with pieces of colored cloth, handsomely embroistered. Here again, on account of opening the piane, it is better to have the upper and lower parts made separately; the top one can be made to hang down a little and fluished off with a point and fringe, like the model given in the accompanying illustration.

Miss Campbell is a large, pleasant faced woman, who looks as though she thoroughly enjoyed her novel business. In a short interview I had with her in her next but small cabin, while she was preparing the dinner for her crew of four men, she said:

"Yes, I've been in this business for three years for myself, but am an old chines, needles and thread and plain canaler. I was brought up on a canalboat, and of course when it became necessary for me to take hold of the management of our boats I knew a good deal about the way of doing business, Still I had lots to learn, but after a few trips managed to pick up all that was needful.

"Of course when I first went to an agents' office things seemed a little ber. queer, and the agents evidently thought it queer also, but both they and myself night, her little mind was still full of have grown accustomed to the conditions and get along with as little friction as do the men folks, though some of them, I believe, claim they do not like to do business with a woman."

Silver Shirt Buttons.

Babies' buttons, as every mother knows, come on cards—three in a set. Now there are eards of buttons for bachelor girls to wear in their shirt waists, but instead of three chained buttons there are six, seven or eight on a card. There are collar buttons, studs for the front and studs and buttons for the cuffs. They are made in silver and gold, plain, chased and enameled, and cost anywhere from 60 cents to $20. Some of the designs are very neat, and some are very flashy and inelegant. It is beginning to look as though pins, masewing were losing their usefulness. New styles in ladies' furnishing goods have buttonholes, but that's all. For fastenings studs only are recommended.
